

Chinese Drywall Disclosure

The presence of Chinese drywall may cause property damage or health problems.

Recently, homeowner reports have been filed concerning problems with Chinese drywall installed in newly constructed homes within the last 3-5 years (2004-2006). Health problems, foul odors and serious corrosive effects on mechanical devices, plumbing and wiring are being reported to local authorities. If you are concerned about the presence of Chinese drywall in a particular property, you should get more information. You can request information from local County Health Departments, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) or contact an ASHI trained professional inspection service to get further information. Should you desire a drywall inspection, you should contact a professional trained in this field.
